C.C.M. made

That's the C.C.M. story and that's the reason 98% of leading amateur and professional skaters in Canada and U.S.A. choose C.C.M. equipment.

Just what does Pro OK'd mean? Simply this. Every skate, every piece of equipment C.C.M. makes has been designed for and with the aid of the people who'll use the equipment, the professionals themselves. All through the hockey season C.C.M. works closely with N.H.L. coaches and players. That means C.C.M. products are okayed by the pro's and proven by the pro's even before they come on the market.

The knowledge gained through this professional experience is extended into the manufacture of all C.C.M. products from Pro down to Pee-Wee.

Look for the Pro OK'd symbol when you buy. It means exactly what it says.

LOOK AT THESE C.C.M. MILESTONES

Production at C.C.M. commences on C.C.M. "Automobile" skates.

1924 ★ C.C.M. introduces the lighter weight, stronger, model "T" tube skate.

1925 ★ C.C.M. introduces the "Goal" skate. 1933 ★ The manufacture of C.C.M. hockey sticks commences.

1934 ★ The C.C.M. "Prolite" hockey skate is put on the market.

1949 ★ Built-in tendon guards introduced for first time by C.C.M.

1957 ★ Nylon-Armour used for the first time in C.C.M. tendon protectors on Tackaberry hockey boots.

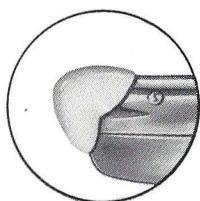

1961 ★ Pro-Gard Heels supplied on C.C.M. hockey skates.

HERE ARE A FEW OF THE C.C.M. FEATURES

C.C.M. PRO-GARD HEEL

Developed in response to requests from leading managers and coaches for more protection against accidental cuts, the C.C.M. Pro-Gard Heel has been tested in the toughest action of all . . . play-off hockey. Smooth rounded surfaces provide excellent protection with no added danger of tripping through accidental entanglement with other skates or sticks.

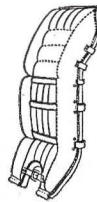

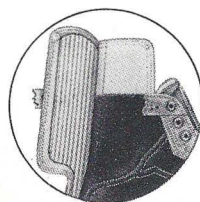

C.C.M. PROLITE SHIN GUARD with NYLON-ARMOUR

Here is another piece of hockey equipment developed in conjunction with top N.H.L. managers and coaches. Light in weight, yet offering the protection against cutting that only Nylon-Armour can give, this shin guard provides the ultimate in safety and comfort for modern hockey's best players.

C.C.M. TENDON PROTECTORS with NYLON-ARMOUR

Here is the best protection available against skate cuts of the vital Achilles tendon. Tough enough to resist shrapnel during the Korean War, this Nylon-Armour material is light in weight, flexible . . . to provide an easy, comfortable fit. Used exclusively on hockey boots made by C.C.M.

C.C.M. PROLITE GOAL KEEPER'S PADS with PRE-SHAPED FIT

The exclusive shape built into these pads by C.C.M. assures easy flexibility in the knee area and plenty of protection across the instep. The construction of the pads keeps the side rolls "square" and minimizes rebound of the puck. Available in full size and pee-wee models.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR

Other than his ability to skate, nothing makes more difference in a player's performance than a well-made skate set.

• OUTFITTING FOR HOCKEY involves a good deal of money and players can't spend a major share of it in a better place than on their skates. In no other sport does the athlete's performance depend so completely on a single item of equipment, so approach your skate purchasing with seriousness and forewarned with the basics offered here.

Hockey has lost too many beginning players who considered themselves victims of "weak" ankles (there is no such thing!) because they were put into an ill-fitting skate purchased by a misguided parent who wanted the set large enough for "Johnny to grow into." If a boot doesn't fit, you can't skate well. Whatever you can spend on a set, get one that fits or your money will be wasted.

Not everyone is able or willing to spend $40 or more for a top quality set. This is no obstacle to the serious player, however, since sturdy and serviceable sets, which will last a long time given proper care, can be had for less.

Because of the importance of design and construction of your skates in relation to performance, the prospective skate buyer needs to be armed with more knowledge than in the purchase of most other sports items. A number of basic construction features can be expected for a certain amount, but before considering them, let's look over the fundamentals of a well-made set.

What To Look For

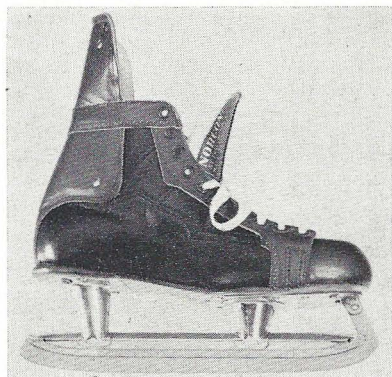

As in anything, materials and workmanship are of prime concern, but experienced skate makers are agreed that the single determining factor which makes a set good or bad is the last upon which the boot is made. Here's what to look for and ask about—whether your skates will be bought from a rink skate shop, sporting goods or hardware store. A reputable sales person will be more interested in correct fit and dollar value than in simply making a sale; if that person impresses you as being the latter type, get out of the place quickly and shop elsewhere.

To fit well, a boot must be snug and close-fitting in the heel, and this cannot be emphasized too strongly. Try the boot on. Then look for these other points:

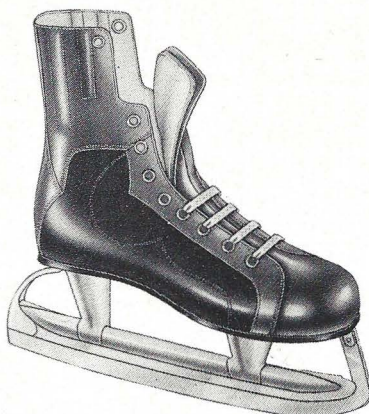

1. Do your toes have room to move? Even though the boot should be snug in length, the last (or pattern, form, etc.) it was made on must have provided sufficient height for toe freedom—whether you realize it, most of your balance and control comes from the front of your foot and is hampered when the toes are cramped for space.

2. Is the lacing gap wide? As boots age, the gap will lessen somewhat, so you need plenty of it to begin with.

3. Does the boot have a strong inside counter and arch support? (The counter is a hard support which follows the inner contour of the foot. Press a finger into the boot where it attaches to the sole—if it is pliable, the counter is weak, or there is none.) These factors are important to comfort, balance and the right stance.

4. Does the boot have a firm, leather sole? Fiber (pressed paper) soles can come apart after being damp several times, the rivets loosen and you never get the best support for your weight.

5. Is the tongue padded? Even a budget-priced skate should have sponge rubber or some other resilient tongue padding to make a tightly-laced skate comfortable.

6. Does the sole protrude out beyond the boot? It shouldn't. When making a tight turn, the sole may catch the ice if it protrudes, causing the skater to fall.

Is Heel Snug?

After checking these points to your satisfaction, review the overall fit. Your heel should be firmly cradled so the foot cannot move in the boot—except for being able to wiggle the toes. The front part of the boot, behind the toes at the ball of the foot, also has to be snug but should be noticeably wider than at the heel, since the normal foot is shaped that way. If the boot doesn't conform to this, the last it was made on was incorrectly designed.

Now that you're convinced the set is properly made, and you are confident of an accurate fit, look over the various models in your price range. It is not always advisable to decide upon an exact figure when setting out to buy skates. Of course, each buyer can spend only so much money. You may see a model a few dollars more than you intended to spend which appeals to you more than another within an absolute price range. This can happen when a helpful and knowledgeable salesman points out the extra features which make one set worth that additional few dollars. Buy the set you like! If it means waiting a while, wait. The psychological effect on your performance is noticeable when you're on a set that isn't quite what you want.

Whatever the amount you are able to spend, you can expect and demand certain elements for a specific number of dollars. The combined opinions of several leading skate manufacturers made possible compilation of the following checklist.

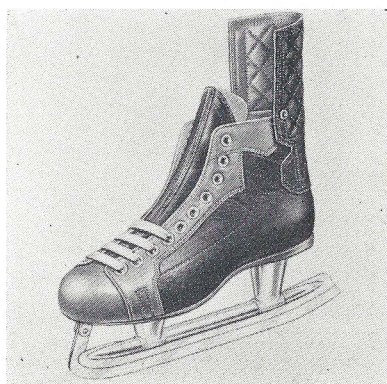

"You Get What You Pay For"

$10.00-15.00—The boot should be made of full grain leather, fully lined. Don't be too critical at this price; that basic economics principle of "getting just what you pay for" applies here. You can find a decent-looking but unlined set at this price. If so, the leather in the uppers must be fairly heavy and have had all the stretch taken out. Otherwise, it won't give sufficient support. The test is simple: Put the boot on, lace it, and watch for stretching

while drawing the laces tight. At this price, you may have to settle for a fiber sole.

$15-20.00—In addition to full grain leather upper and full lining, a good leather sole can be expected.

$20-30.00—Now the buyer is up to the price where he can become critical and make certain demands in all fairness. In this range, you may expect, in addition to the foregoing points, that you can get a very precise and exact fit. The boot should have a long, firm inside counter, a well-padded sponge tongue and the snug heel mentioned earlier. Full grain leather, and leather lining, is to be expected, as is a hardened tube as well as blade. Very solid counters should appear in this range and the toes should be guaranteed not to crush.

At around the $25.00 mark, a skate may have a loose lining, which means one with no stitching around the counter or heel and no seams inside. This also is the point where one may look for a top grain lining, perhaps with a light suede effect to the finish.

$30-40.00 This is the beginning point for semi-professional models. Add to those features in the previous price category the following: High quality leather lining which has been treated to resist the harmful effects of perspiration, long and very strong counters, and top-grade, properly-designed blades of high quality tempered steel.

MORE THAN $40.00—For those who want the absolute finest in materials and craftsmanship, here is the professional boot. At the top of this class, you find the consensus to be that the best material for hockey boots is kangaroo leather. This is so because kangaroo is light in weight, also is the toughest for its weight, and does not stretch. A high-grade lining, perhaps English Kip, or some other top leather, may be innerlined with a heavy duck to give body and durability to the upper, and added support to the player. All built-in protection, including the counters and stiffeners at the heels must be very hard.

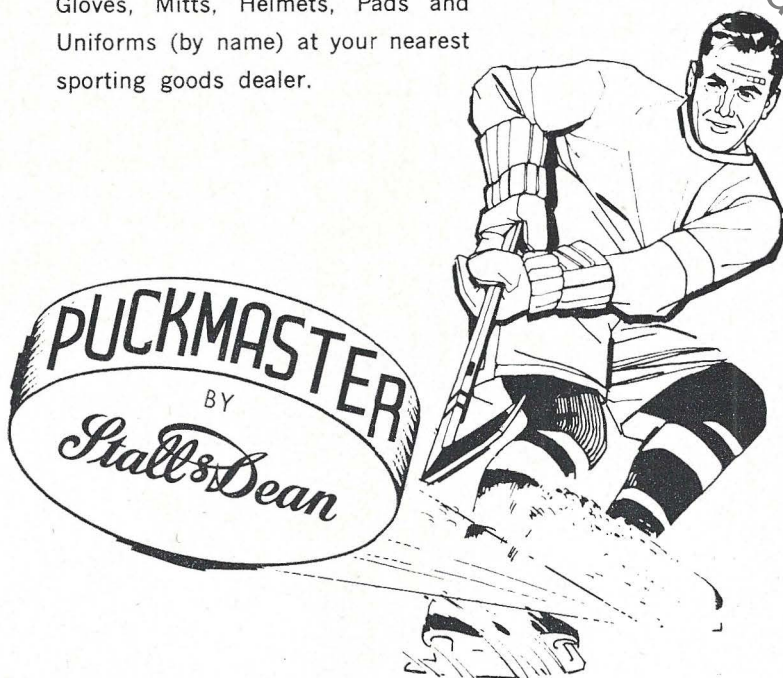

The two most important points of protection in a hockey skate are the toe and tendon guard. Toes must be very strong and usually are of leather with a box toe reinforcement supporting from the inside. One maker uses toes of heavy felt impregnated with asphalt.

At the other end of the boot, various materials are used for inner padding of the tendon guard, all of them good. One leading manufacturer uses multiple-ply nylon armor, another uses a combination of rubber and fibre inserts and still another uses a copper mesh.

As for blades, be sure you get the best tempered set available for the money. Look out for soft, low priced ones, since they don't hold an edge very long and are so hard on sharpening wheels that a skate shop sometimes charges more because the soft steel fills the grit of the wheel very quickly and renders it useless. Quite the opposite also applies to budget-priced skates—some of them have case-hardened blades that are so hard they chew up a grinding wheel and also are brittle to a degree that they break rather easily.

When setting out to buy skates, above all go to reputable dealers with wide selections. Look over the various brands, compare several models in your price range and make your decision after finding the set that really fits—both your pocketbook and your feet. $

SELECTING A HOCKEY STICK

... requires knowledge of what suits you best and why

• What makes a good stick? The more a player understands why he likes a stick, the better he will play—and select sticks that fit him best. And the more experienced the player, the more emphasis he places on getting a stick that feels just right for him.

Getting that important "feel"—or balance—is dependent upon the individual's own judgement. The deciding aspects of the right feel are several: First, the matter of balance itself—the stick feels comfortable, not too heavy at the blade end, nor too light at the grip end. Second, the way it feels to the player's gloved hand—which is determined by the amount of bevel on its four edges, too little making the edges feel sharp and too much making the stick feel rounded like a club and clumsy.

Third, and of importance to the younger player, is the matter of whip, or springiness, in the shaft of the stick. Before the younger player has reached the age where he is physically mature and has attained maximum strength, he will do better with a stiffer stick, which may be a less expensive one. It takes more strength to fire a shot at comparable speed with a whippy stick than a stiff one, so players from juvenile or bantam classes on down might give this some thought, bearing in mind that as they grow in strength a whippy stick might become advisable for the fastest, most powerful shot. Lighter-weight sticks also aid younger players.

Obviously, the choice of lie, hand (left, right or neutral) and length will vary with individuals. Too often, the less-experienced player pays too little attention to these details. There are criteria to go by. In the second edition of his excellent book ICE HOCKEY, Eddie Jeremiah, the highly-respected Dartmouth hockey coach, tells how to choose the right length and lie for your height. Take your normal stance on the ice with your stick in front of you. If the toe of the blade is off the ice, you need a lower number lie. If the heel is off, use a higher lie. A stick of the right length will reach your chin while you stand in stocking feet.

To avoid losing a stick during fast action, build a knob of tape at the grip end, or you may want to consider one of the rubber knobs available which merely slip over the end of your stick.

Taping the blade gives longer stick life and improved puck control, and as soon as the tape begins to fray, replace it. Also remember to use friction tape—a black puck against that black background eludes the eye of a sharp goaltender for a split second longer and can mean a goal.

The basic elements of a good stick are the woods used, lamination, balance and workmanship. As for woods, the leading stick makers agree that the best combination is a shaft of second growth northern white ash and a blade of second growth rock elm, second growths preferred to first because they are tougher. Density and grain of the woods should be checked carefully.

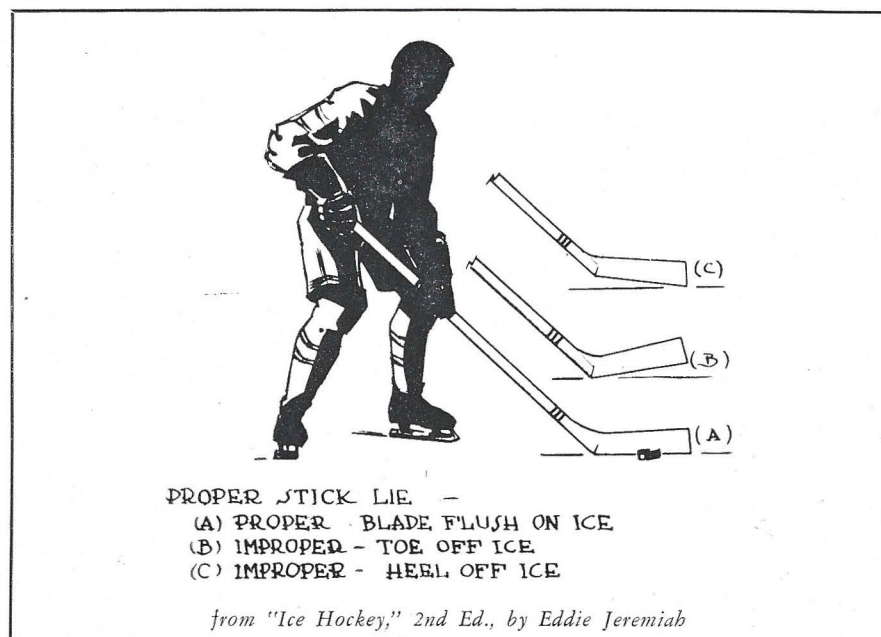

WHAT TO INSPECT

How can the player check before he buys? Look at the grain of the wood—is it steady? Also, look over the lamination job to see that the stick will stay together. The scarf, the junction of the blade with the shaft, should be examined.

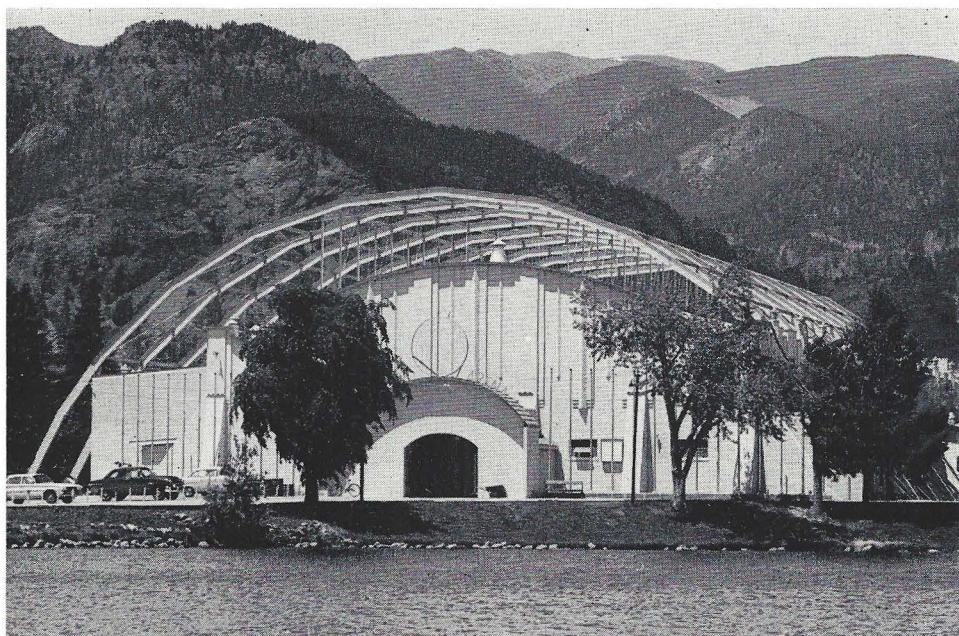

Wood quality is especially important in goalie sticks, all of us having seen them literally explode from the impact of a flying puck. Since the goalie stick quickly gets chewed off on the bottom, a high quality wood, plus careful taping, makes a noticeable difference.

Increasing in popularity during recent seasons is the glass-wrapped stick, which warrants special consideration by the player in a program where he buys his own sticks. The glass-wrap costs somewhat more but it is considerably stronger and generally will offset the additional outlay by returning longer service through reduced breakage.

In choosing a stick, above all be sure that it feels right and is comfortable for you. It has become stylish in recent years to round off the heel and toe—but don't do it just because Gordie Howe and Bobby Hull do. It helps them and may help you, but don't butcher your sticks simply to imitate.

Another Celebrated Rink Using Frick Equipment

The famous Broadmoor Hotel, at Colorado Springs, has used Frick Refrigeration for food service since 1919. The original compressors are still in operation.

In 1937 The Boardmoor installed an indoor ice rink, which attracted six times as many skaters as expected and was later kept open in summer. For the past 12 years the ice has been maintained continuously, the year 'round.

Now the rink has been enlarged and seats provided for 5,000 spectators. The extended roof is supported from overhead steel arches. A new Frick compressor supplements those formerly installed.

For dependability and economy, there's nothing to equal Frick refrigeration! The scores of rinks throughout America, which are Frick-equipped from the floor up, are the best evidence of the superiority of Frick engineering and Frick machinery.

THE GOALTENDER

• STANDING IN THE NETS and being fired at by the opposition is no easy job but it becomes tougher yet when a goaltender is poorly or improperly outfitted. If there is any single member of a team who can make or break the club, the goalie is it.

What does he need for top performance? First, let's get him out on the ice with a stick in his hand—which is the first place mistakes are made. Don't butcher that stick! For the youngest players, who may find full-sized goalie sticks too large and unwieldy to handle easily, scaled-down models are available from several manufacturers. A boy in the bantam class generally is big enough to handle a full-size stick, except that the shaft may be too long for some. It's permissible to saw off the shaft to a comfortable length, but don't cut off any more than necessary because it limits the ice area that can be covered from the crease. Never cut off the blade—if it's too heavy, get a scaled-down version. Sawing off part of the blade ruins the stick's balance and makes it hard to handle. With a bit of experimentation, each goalie can find how best to tailor a stick to his own tastes and requirements.

GOAL SKATES NEEDED

Now, how about his skate set? Once a youthful hockey player decides he is going to settle in the cage and work hard to become a good netminder, he definitely should have a pair of goalie skates. Before that, while the player may be pondering his future as a goaltender, this is one solution to the matter of skates. An ordinary hockey set can be used, with a couple of modifications. Have the blades ground flat, rather than the usual hollow-grind. Use a stone on the edges to take off the sharpness, since a goalie wants to be able to slide back and forth across the cage, instead of dig in and take off rapidly as his teammates must. The second modification is to add a small but strong leather strap around the tubes to prevent a puck from getting through, as do the specially-designed blades of goal skates. This is a workable answer, but should be only temporary. The extra padding and protection of regular goal skates should be considered, as should the increased comfort and confidence afforded their wearer.

Next in order is the most noticeable item of goalie equipment, his shin pads. The most important thing here is that they fit properly, with the break exactly at the knee. If economies are necessary, this isn't the place to exercise them. Many good quality goalie pad sets are made; don't compromise on quality for several reasons. Again, a player who lacks confidence in his equipment can't do his best. A quality set of pads will be made in such a way that the bottom of each pad reaches almost to the ice and this is important in stopping shots on the surface. Goalie pads have to be precisely fitted so they come to within an inch of the ice but not so close that they touch it, causing the goaltender to slip and fall. The attaching straps on good sets are plenty large so they can be cut to give an exact fit for the smaller player. The heavy leather of good sets is stiff and can be broken in in only one way—by being used. A preservative solution is good for the leather and softens it somewhat, but kicking out shots is the real way to break in goalie pads. Pro NHL goalies have at least two sets of pads at a time—one, a new set is used only in practices until broken in, and the other set, a year old, is used in games.

MODIFY UNIFORM

This brings us to the goalie's uniform. There are no special models made for goaltenders, so he makes his own changes to get better protection. For arm protection, take an old sweat-shirt and sew in felt padding from the wrist to the shoulder on the inside of the sleeve to protect that part of the arm exposed to shots. Under the jersey, of course, is a chest protector. This should be well made to furnish good protection, but not bulky or so large for the individual that it binds around his arms and impairs quick movement.

The goalie's pants, or breezers, also can use a couple changes. The regular Charlie-Horse pads built into good hockey pants should be removed because they are hard and cause the puck to rebound, instead of fall dead at the goalie's feet where he can control it. Sew in felt or soft fibre padding which will be protective but not bounce the puck out to a potential scorer. Also, sew in felt padding at the crotch where there is no protection, keeping in mind that the goaltender also must have a very strong protective cup inside. And here's another little trick developed years ago. Sew two rows of felt padding spaced a couple inches apart into the inside thigh area of one leg and then sew another strip, just wide enough to fit between the first two, into the other leg. In this way, a goalie can clamp his knees together and there will be no space for a puck to slip through. A large piece of heavy felt sewed across the entire seat is beneficial, too, since the goalie frequently must go down to stop a shot. A final point regarding pants; the legs must be long enough to fit down inside the top of the pads and not leave an exposed thigh open to flying pucks.

GET SPECIAL GLOVES

Goaltender's gloves in recent years have consisted of a catching mitt for the free hand and a normal glove with heavy felt or sponge rubber back-of-hand pad for the stick hand. Many fine models are made by a number of companies.

At this point the goaltender is outfitted from toes to shoulders. What about above the shoulders? The controversial facemask now enters the picture. Responsible and thinking hockey leaders nationwide agree that the goalie using a facemask will be spared serious cuts, broken face bones, and knocked-out teeth. Some goalies, looking upon facemasks as "sissy," refuse to wear them. But none has ever proved the Montreal Canadiens' great netminder, Jacques Plante, a sissy and he designed and builds his own. Hockey leaders, coaches, managers, and others who allow young goalies to play without face protection simply are being foolish, as is the player himself who refuses to use such protection. Dentists and doctors are expensive and will themselves endorse such protective devices. Face protection became mandatory in football some time ago, and hockey certainly is as vigorous, and far faster, than gridiron action.

With the right equipment, and the increased confidence he gains from having it, a goaltender will catch and bat down, kick out and sit on, more potential goals. The red light will blink less often behind his cage, the scoreboard will show fewer changes, and his team will enjoy a more successful hockey season. §

JUST YOU WAIT, BOY

Tommy's his name. Hockey's his game.

He's nine—and just bustin' to be twelve. You should see him skate. And stickhandle. Maybe he'll fill those Black Diamond gloves sooner than we think.

One thing is sure: Tom uses Cooper-Weeks equipment. He wouldn't be seen near a blueline in anything less. Like most youngsters he's learned about the good things early.

Cooper-Weeks supplies teams (peewee to pro) with the best value you can get in protective equipment. Have done for over 25 years. All price ranges, too. Besides gloves there are shin guards, shoulder and elbow pads, head guards, body pads, pants, tendon guards. And kit bags to carry it all in. The kind of a bundle Tommy would love to lug.

So just you wait, boy.

You'll be there soon.

WINN WELL

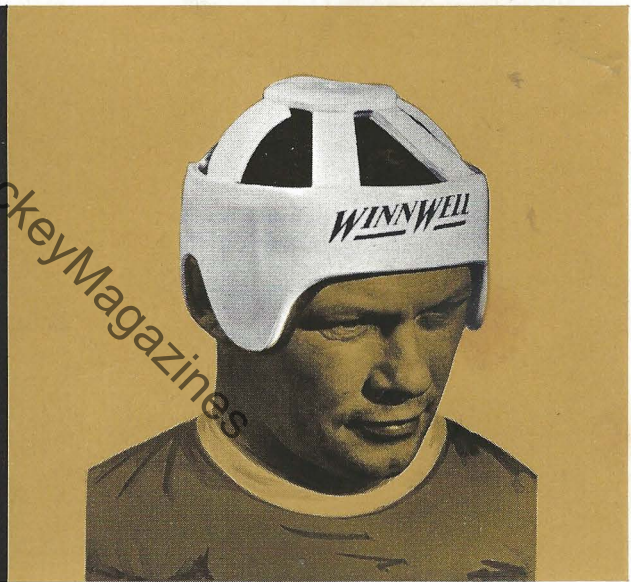

KURV-PAM HOCKEY GLOVES

KURV-PAM is an entirely new design in Hockey Gloves. Not just curved fingers, but a new curved palm serves as a chassis on which the rest of the glove is built. This provides a neat fitting, longer wearing wrinkle free palm, and a natural stick grip for better, surer, stick handling. BE SURE AND ASK FOR THE NEW KURV-PAM* by name, be satisfied with only the best!

HOCKEY PANTS

A full range of styles to meet the requirements of both professional and amateur players. Winnwell Hockey Pants are designed to provide special protection and freedom of movement. Choose from a large selection of colours and models.

HOCKEY HELMETS

See the New professional helmet #448, made from vinyl dip ensolite. This helmet is light weight, moisture repellent and much more protective than the ordinary helmets. There is a Winnwell protective hockey helmet for every player and to fill all requirements.
